21 June 2019

Dear Mr Cameron,

An unseasonal chill is in the air on this sunny June day as I sit in Huntingdon Library under the watchful gaze of John Major's large bust statue posing with hand on chin. I became aware of John Major as a child and his visits to my former primary school. The future PM driving a brown British Leyland Mini that had been designed in genius mind of Greek immigrant Alec Issigonis and I became aware of your good self – David - via a television in the Cavell Centre, Peterborough following deportation from Brazil in 2012.

I have spent the last two weeks producing classical music video – 'Oculus Dei – The Whore of Babylon or Bob' at a local night spot laptop computer club named McDonalds and also composed consequential letters of introduction to individuals who I believe will behave responsibly following it's viewing.

Holsts 'The Planets' and the theme from 'Star Wars', were my introduction to classical music, and as a Rock 'n' Reggae drummer today I find listening to the genre very soothing.

On Wednesday I am flying to Lanzarote and returning to a broken down Jaguar successfully exported to fishing village Caleta de Famara three years ago. Prior to producing my latest video I had written a letter to Queen Elizabeth II sat inside this Cat that used to purr.....

I have been Surfing in the Canary Islands since 2015 following the death of my father, who had taken our family to Lanzarote during a 1980's February half term. My surfing there has been assisted very much by Russian owned business Red Star Surf, my Jaguar breaking down in reach of their powerful Wi-Fi Technology. The store now features in a music video dedicated to The MODS – 'Mike's Flight Home'.

I understand that you and your family were a customer of Red Star Surf around about the time I first encountered their provision of Mr Zoggs Surf Wax. Taken the liberty of using a photograph of your wife Samantha in my latest mash up production dedicated to Holst's Saturn and Mars, I am requesting your permission for the usage.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but I've been lead to believe that following student life you spent time in India. A life long fan of British Comedy, you may recall the BBC's 'Three of a Kind', once upon a time they broadcasted a comedy short titled 'Handi, Bendi Ghandi' – however if you watch this today on YouTube – Ghandi is now spelt Gandhi - as is his autobiography.

A photo of you sharing a pint with a powerful Chinaman also features in my latest video and you, as I, may recall that Guinness is spelt with one 'n'. Today everywhere you look, past and present, this Irish brew is spelt Guinness – the same as a book of records. The advertising campaign 'Guinness pure Genius', starring a Blade Runner Robot – no longer 'works' when viewing it's YouTubed archives.

This is known as the Mandela Effect – and some people believe the Sun flying over our heads, changed hue to a bright white around about the same time Cadbury's dropped the letter S and the Dollar sign reduced itself to One upright.

If we get the opportunity to meet in the near future I would like to discuss my concern as to BMW having re-designed the Mini with decimal units in mind.

Wishing you a very pleasant summer, I would like to thank the British Tax Payer for funding my 2012 short voluntary stay in a hospital wing named after Nurse Edith Cavell, who was a very brave lady. Shot by German firing squad her final words were:-

'Patriotism is not enough, I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone.'

I intend to deliver this letter to Huntingdon Conservative Club on Monday and am providing your invitation to 'Time Tunnel – Atari Alliance'.

Hoping to make your acquaintance soon, preferably in the Surf!

Yours sincerely

Graeme Parker.
